

HOW THE BARANGAY GOT ITS NAME?

About the middle of the 17th century some settlers came to settle on the eastern part of the present barrio site and formed a group. The group formed divided into two sectors. Each sector occupied a certain section of the sitio. The people stayed on the eastern portion of the place called their puroc sector NANGLACUBAN and those on the northern portion called their place CAVALDEZAN for the families who settled were the Valdez family. The place Nanglacuban and Cavaldezan as a sitio was named De Villa.

Several years after the establishment of this barangay, more people came to settle to this place. After two or more decades of existence, in 1893, De Villa's population increased. Spaniards from Tarlac town who went to Nueva Ecija would pass at the place and they appreciated the barangay because of the scenery. They would exclaim "buen vista" and people who overheard the phrase would repeat it over and over again until it became a common expression and from this, De Villa was renamed Buena Vista now Buenvista. The beautiful views seen in this barangay was the origin of its being called BUENAVISTA.
